Woodall Foundation Sponsors Summer Basketball Clinics

It was a busy summer for the Woodall Foundation. With school out and quality, affordable entertainment hard to find, the Woodall Foundation and its volunteers stepped up to provide some "hoops" fun for some medically challenged kids and their families. As always, the Woodall Foundation sponsored basketball events are free of charge, and each participant receives a complementary Woodall Foundation basketball to take home.

Super Sports Day at Gilda's Club

On July 9th the Woodall Foundation team of volunteers participated in the "Camp Noogie Super Sports Day" at Gilda's Club. This annual event allows parents, who are dealing with the hardships of cancer, to leave their children in a supervised environment while they attend to doctor's appointments and run other errands. This event is aimed at promoting health and fitness along with good sportsmanship through recreation and exercise. The addition of a brand-new basketball goal made this year's clinic even better.

Bryan's House Goes Back to School

Bryan's House held a "Back to School Bash" at its facility on August 8th and invited all the members and their families to attend. The fun filled morning included food, activities, and featured basketball instruction for all age groups by the Woodall Foundation's team of volunteer coaches on the Bryan's House "Sports Court" donated by the Dallas Mavericks. Following the event, each child received school supplies in preparation for the upcoming year.

Woodall Foundation Sponsors Circus Experience for Deserving Kids and Their Families

The Woodall Foundation sponsors several events throughout the year aimed at "building a brighter future for kids", and the circus is always among the most popular. Illness and other hardships have prevented many of these children from attending the circus in the past, but the Woodall Foundation is committed to changing that.

From July 28th to August 9th, the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus made its annual stop in Dallas at the American Airlines Center. This year's performance was called "Over the Top" and featured costumes, choreography and acrobatics that resembled something you might find in a Las Vegas style show.

Once again the Woodall Foundation provided circus tickets for disadvantaged and medically challenged children and their families to attend. This year groups from the Autism Treatment Center, Bryan's House, Gilda's Club, and an organization that provides leadership and mentoring for refugee children all received tickets for their members.
